

The major differences between the dysplastic cells in cervical dysplasia (CIN) and the normal cervical epithelial cells include all of the following, except:

High N/C ratio (nuclear/ cytoplasmic ratio)

✓ number of nuclei per cell

nuclear contour irregularities

nuclear hyperchromasia

Pap smear test is considered a successful medical screening test for the detection of invasive cervical cancer, yet, it is not that successful in detection of the pre-invasive lesions (CIN).

True

False

